How to Finance Health Care in Low-Income Countries? The Liberia Case
Catherine Connor, Hong Wang
Recovering from 30 years of civil war and continued poverty ($130 GDP per capita), Liberia struggles to deliver basic services to all citizens and demonstrate the "peace dividend." Despite a policy of free care for all, out-of-pocket health expenditures are high and donor funding won't last forever. What should Liberia do? Is health insurance an option? Join an interactive session to find out the options and deepen your understanding of health financing.
